

PORTFOLIO MANAGER COMMENT

The conflict involving Iran flared up again during the month, reversing the previous trend of declining interest rates and risk premia. Brent crude oil briefly traded above USD 100 per barrel but fell back towards the end of the month as tensions eased somewhat. Economic data were generally in line with expectations, with the exception of the U.S. CPI, which recorded a larger-than-expected monthly decline—the sharpest since 2020. The major central banks kept their policy rates unchanged, although the Federal Reserve struck a dovish tone at its meeting late in the month. This pushed short-term yields lower while long-term yields rose, resulting in a pronounced steepening of the yield curve.

In Sweden, short-term rates did not decline; instead, the curve largely shifted upwards in parallel, with the four-year swap rate recording the largest move. The Swedish 4-year swap rate increased by 41 basis points during the month to 2.82%. IG spreads have widened during the month, the European credit index by 3 basis points to 54 basis points and the US also by 3 basis points to 53 basis points. The European HY credit index has widened by about 18 basis points to 262 bp during the month, while the US HY credit index has widened by about 14 basis points to 316 bp.
