

PERENNE SHORT TERM BOND

MONTHLY REPORT – FEBRUARY 2026

PORTFOLIO MANAGER COMMENT

Communication from the Riksbank about a possible interest rate cut and a slowing inflation rate has slowly led to lower interest rates in Sweden. Looking ahead, the market is simultaneously stimulated by lowered mortgage requirements and reduced food VAT. The market is uncertain about how all this will play out and is currently pricing in a 50% probability of an interest rate cut this year but at the same time a high probability of a quick increase after that. Long forward rates are down about 25 basis points.

After last year's problems in the private credit market, investors have tried to get money back in a number of semi-liquid funds in the US. This has led to problems that we have previously seen in the Swedish credit market where an investment is sold with the promise of better liquidity than the underlying market can bear. In the US, this traditionally institutional market has been opened to smaller investors who have been offered liquidity in their investments, which of course has led to problems when they want to use this liquidity when they feel worried about the market.

The Swedish one-year swap rate has fallen 9 basis points during the month to 1.92%. One-year Swedish mortgage bonds yield 1.95% at the end of the month.
